LAWYER SPOTLIGHT

Jeremy Shealy was born in Palestine, Texas and was raised in Lafayette, Louisiana. He graduated from Lafayette High School in 1999. After graduation, Jeremy attended Louisiana State University and earned his Bachelor of Arts and Sciences, magna cum laude, in 2002. He then attended Louisiana State University Law School and graduated in 2006.

Jeremy's primary area of practice is oil and gas. His greatest professional accomplishments are representing various oil and gas companies before the Louisiana Commissioner of Conservation in the creation of hundreds of drilling and production units. He is a Director and Legal Advisor of the Louisiana Gulf Coast Oil Exposition (LAGCOE) and a member of numerous landman organizations.

Jeremy was a defensive back on the LSU Fighting Tiger football team and continues to be one of LSU's biggest fans. During his playing days, Jeremy earned the LSU Athletic Director's Cup for Academic Excellence and Southeastern Conference (SEC) Scholar Athlete Honor Roll. Jeremy's proudest moment while playing for LSU was the first time he ran out of the tunnel in Tiger Stadium, giving his parents the gift of seeing their last name on the back of a LSU jersey worn on the field of Tiger Stadium. He was also fortunate to share the experience with his former high school and college teammate, Trev Faulk, who remains one of his closest friends to this day.
