LAWYER SPOTLIGHT

Greg was born in New Orleans, Louisiana, but raised (from the age of 4) in Lake Arthur, Louisiana, a small town on a beautiful lake in southwest Louisiana. He attended Gorette High School in Lake Arthur, a small parochial school. Greg attended LSU for undergraduate school, where he majored in English, and graduated cum laude in 1973. He was active in Sigma Chi fraternity during his undergraduate years. He then attended LSU Law School, where he graduated with honors in 1976. He served as Senior Associate Editor of the Louisiana Law Review during his senior year of law school. Upon graduation, he joined the national law firm of Fulbright and Jaworski in its Houston office, and practiced there for three years before returning to Louisiana and joining Onebane in 1979.

Greg has practiced labor and employment law (management side) for his entire 34 years of practicing law. He represents businesses throughout the United States in all aspects of the diverse and exciting field of labor and employment law, including dealing with unions, giving advice on employment issues, and defending administrative claims, arbitrations and lawsuits. He was honored to be inducted as a Fellow in the College of Labor & Employment Lawyers in 2000.

Though he finds it difficult to pinpoint one single legal victory as his biggest, one of his biggest satisfactions comes from having the opportunity to train thousands of managers and supervisors around the world in practicing effective and fair employee relations techniques. One of his favorite training tips for his trainees is to always follow the "Golden Rule of the Workplace," acting fairly, consistently, and honestly in all dealings with their employees.

During Greg's senior year at Gorette High School, he quarterbacked his high school football team to the only district championship in the school's history. He also held the district pole vault record for many years. Greg enjoys playing golf, hunting, listening to good music, and watching movies in his home theatre. He is also a huge LSU Tiger fan and has become a fan of the Tulane Green Wave. Greg is the proud father of three children and two stepsons, and has a grandson, Sam!
